STONE AND THE SINGLE TAX.

Moberly Democrat.
It is difficult to understand how Judge Wallace could make an issue of the single tax in a race against Senator Stone. When this question was up in 1912, Senator Stone appeared before the convention of Democratic candidates at Jefferson City in September, urging them strongly to declare against the single tax. This was the first positive declaration by any man of prominence in either party concerning this question, antedating Judge Wallace's own expressions. Upon the insistence of Senator Stone, the Democratic state platform declared unequivocally against the offensive taxing system. Several men who were on the platform committee of that convention have since stated that they took that action because of Senator Stone's strong plea. Afterward in the campaign, in nearly all of Senator Stone's speeches, he denounced the single tax in the course of his discussion of the issues, although he did not confine himself to that question alone, for he was out making Democratic speeches. He traveled over the state at his own expense, never receiving a cent from the state committee or any other source.

Senator Stone has filed his declaration with the Secretary of State as a candidate for United States Senator from Missouri. He will get more than 100,000 majority and will continue to serve the people of his state in the Senate.—Howell County Gazette.

All friends of President Wilson's administration will agree that Senator Stone is doing exactly the right thing in staying on the job regardless of his political fences back home.—Warrensburg Star-Journal.

Way Out.

The easiest way to avoid argument over the pronunciation of a word is to use a synonym, as those who say "station" instead of "depot" know. But few would go so far as the carpenter who, in conversation with a friend on a street car, answered a query as to his work by saying: "I'm working in one of those automobile barns."

Forget Them.

Gather up all thy sins—old wrongs, old hatreds, burning angers, memories of men's treachery; stuff them into a bag and heave them into the gulf of oblivion. Your life is not in the past, but in the future. "We are saved by hope."—Newel Dwight Hillis, D.D.

New Berry in Demand.

The loganberry, a hybrid of the blackberry and raspberry, is said to make the finest of jellies, jams and pies. Introduced a few years ago in the west, its popularity has been steadily increasing, and the demand now outruns the supply. Western Oregon and Washington are the greatest producers of the new berry.

Loose Screws.

Very often a screw hole gets so worn that the screw will not stay in. In such a case cut narrow strips of corn and fill the hole completely. Then force the screw in. This will make it as tight as if driven into an entirely new hole.

Fooled Once.

Little Francis was not to be fooled twice.

The heavy black clouds had massed in the east and west, the lightning was flashing fiercely between the heavy, incessant rolling of the thunder.

Francis was terribly frightened and his fond mother had gathered her young hopeful into her arms and tried logically to calm his fears.

"Don't be afraid, darling. There's nothing to fear. God sends the thunderstorm to clear the air, water the flowers, and make it cooler for us. Now, don't cry, dear; it won't harm you, and everything will be better when it's over."

The little fellow listened intently and as his mother finished he looked up at her gravely, and said: "No, no, mother, you talk exactly the way you did last week when you took me to the dentist, to have my tooth pulled."—Chicago Sunday Examiner.

The Country Home.

In spring the robins hover round;
The bluebirds sing in glee;
The chipmunks scamper o'er the ground.

And chatter merrily;
The farmer whistles as he turns
The fresh and fragrant loam;
His heart with loving ardor burns
For this, his country home.

In summertime the toil and stress
Of harvest is severe;
And yet, withal, the joys that bless
The farmer's life are here;
With boys and girls to sport and play
Beneath the sky's blue dome,
And her—his helpmeet all life's way—
The heart of this, his home.

In Autumn life is rich and full
With nature's ripened store
Of golden gifts to pick and pull
And garner safe before
Jack Frost arrives in time to touch
With breath like light seafoam—
To blast these blessings prized so much

In wintertime the farmer reads,
And cultivates his mind;
Some time for heart and social needs

This season he can find;
Let tempests snarl and howl outside,
He has no need to roam;
In peace and comfort he may bide
In this, his country home.
